

AMAR YATRA

"Amar Yatra" is a gripping and thought-provoking book written by Arvind Bhargava. The story begins during the eleventh hour of Armageddon, where the world is on the brink of destruction due to missiles flying all over the globe. In the midst of chaos, Tulsi, a determined individual, is trying to save as many lives as possible.

Fast forward to May 2028, the protagonist, a retired businessperson from Silicon Valley named Amar, embarks on a personal journey to the Rudraprayag district in North India. He leaves behind his family and travels to Kedarnath, a small pilgrimage town situated in the Himalayas.

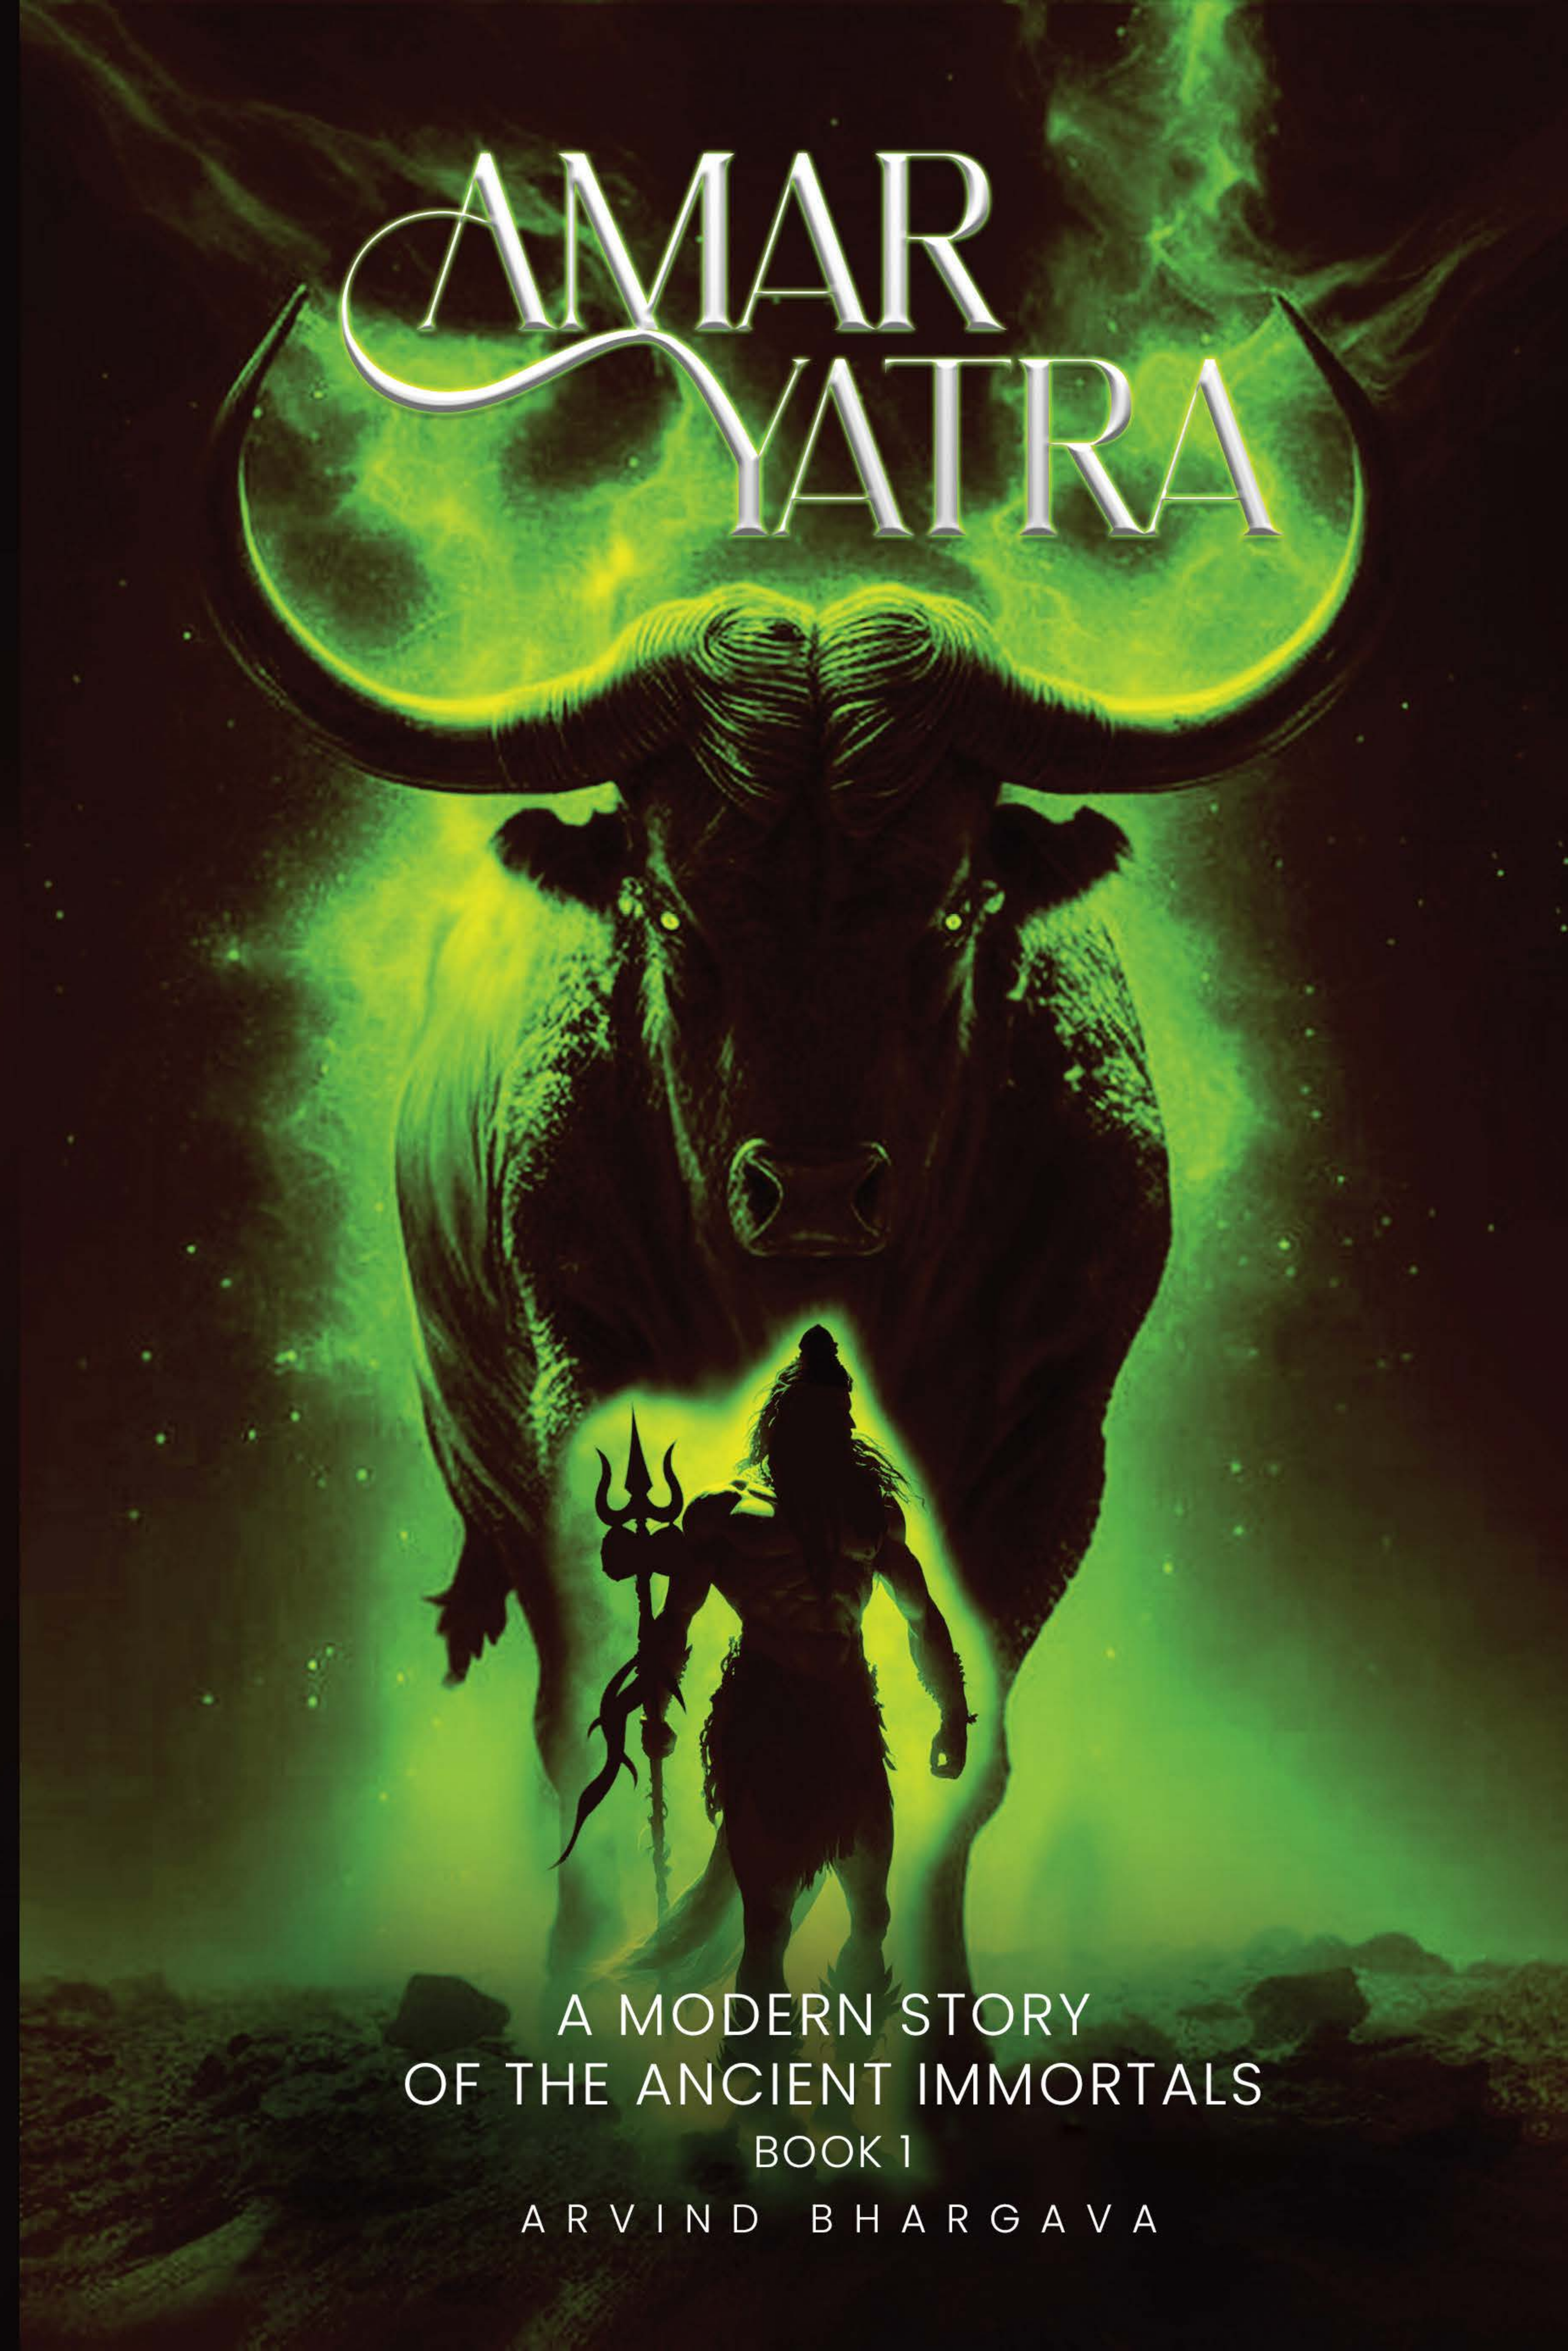

Amar reflects on his life, health, and the desire to avoid being a burden to his loved ones. With a mix of emotions, he contemplates his decision to undertake this solitary trip. Throughout his journey, he encounters unexpected meetings and experiences that bring about a profound shift in his perspective.

As Amar reaches Kedarnath, he finds solace in the stunning natural surroundings and the spiritual aura of the town. He contemplates the significance of Kedarnath, its ancient legends, and the connection to Lord Shiv. Amar seeks enlightenment and a higher purpose as he explores the town and its surroundings.

"Amar Yatra" is a tale that delves into themes of mortality, personal growth, and the search for meaning in life. It combines elements of spirituality, adventure, and self-discovery, taking readers on a captivating journey through the mystical landscapes of the Himalayas.
